THE BELLS BENEATH BRACKENFORD

Kael Drakeshield | Session 4

The Drowned Archive

Met Sister Anwen, an elderly priest and archivist, at the small temple in Brackenford.

She had records of the original construction of the town. Apparently the bellfoundry was built on top of an old temple complex dedicated to Saint Orra.

Anwen also mentioned that a number of old scholars had researched vampirism and the relationship between the Shadowfell and undeath. Niko seemed particularly interested in this.

Met Veyra Quill, a smuggler who knew the route to the Drowned Archive. She charged us 20 gold for directions and insisted on accompanying us part of the way.

The archive is partially flooded and located beneath the old river district.

Found the Brass Astrolabe in a locked chamber.

Other discoveries:

- Ancient writing describing a machine that turns sound into magical energy.
- References to three seals.
- A damaged mural showing a large bell above a dark circular chamber.
- A name: Eldrin Valtoris, written in the margin of one of the older documents.

The name caught my attention. Eldrin was the wizard who healed me after the mercenary mission where I was injured.

The document was too damaged to read properly.

Combat: Animated skeletons and a floating armour construct.

Recovered the astrolabe. Also found a silvered dagger, 46 gold and a small crystal containing what appeared to be trapped smoke.