THE BELLS BENEATH BRACKENFORD

Faelan Haversham | Session 8

The Gloam Engine

Entered the reservoir through the old water channels.

The chamber below is considerably older than the town itself.

The Engine is a large mechanical structure consisting of rotating rings surrounding a central black crystal.

The crystal appears to be the focal point of the Shadowfell breach.

Othric Vale was conducting the activation ritual.

Combat began when several shadow creatures emerged.

Tactical observations:

- Othric's magic distorted distances and appeared to interfere with movement.
- The creatures were partially incorporeal.
- The Engine reacted to damage inflicted on the surrounding inscriptions.
- The Brass Astrolabe was essential to the alignment process.

Party actions:

- Kael and Echo engaged Othric.
- Niko removed the astrolabe.
- Karma disrupted the magical energy surrounding the crystal.
- Idris interfered with the mechanism.
- I damaged one of the ritual inscriptions.

The Engine destabilised and the breach collapsed.

Othric disappeared before the collapse. His death is unconfirmed.

We escaped as the reservoir flooded.

Campaign outcome

The Gloam Engine has been disabled.

Brackenford is safe, although the Ashen Choir may still have surviving members.

Ysabet intends to remain and investigate.

Elira rewarded the party.

Unresolved research:

- Eldrin Valtoris's relationship with the Ashen Choir.
- The nature of Kael's shadow echo.
- The exact method for reversing Niko's vampirism.
- Whether the Gloam Engine can be permanently destroyed.
- The relationship between haemocraft and planar magic.

End of current field journal.
